Education Assistant (EA) Interview Questions and Answers example. On this page you will find examples of Education Assistant (EA) Interview Questions and suggested Answers. Study them thoroughly noting that the set of questions are just example of interview questions that you may use for practice.

Here are the Education Assistant interview questions and answers examples

1. Why do you think you're qualified to be an education assistant?

An education assistant is a subordinate position that requires applicants to work well with their immediate supervisors and children. This question asks applicants if they've thought about the reasons they want to be an education assistant and what they bring to the position.

Suggested answer:

"I previously worked at an after-school program for primary students. As I worked there, I realized I enjoyed working with young kids. I believe that as an education assistant I'll have the ability to play a more hands-on role in a child's day-to-day learning and transfer some of my enthusiasm for learning to my students, making school a more enjoyable experience for them."

2. What role do you think an education assistant plays in the classroom?

An applicant should discuss what role they believe an education assistant plays daily in the classroom. This question ensures applicants fully understand the role and responsibilities of an education assistant.

Suggested answer:

"The education assistant's job is important because it allows the instructor to devote all their efforts to offering as much instruction, attention and assistance as possible to the students. As an EA, I would handle the more repetitive tasks, such as grading documents, supervising tests and arranging documentation, so the teacher can concentrate on the larger role of teaching and ensuring students are learning the information."

3. If a small group of kids is constantly disrupting the class by laughing, talking and passing notes, how would you handle the situation?

As an EA, there might be times where the person will need to discipline a student or deal with behavioral problems. This question shows if applicants are capable of handling a difficult situation on their own.

Suggested answer:

"If students were interfering with the class and didn't appear to be focusing, I would follow whatever disciplinary action the teacher and I had agreed upon previously. In most cases, this would involve separating the disruptive students on opposite sides of the classroom. By separating them, they are still a part of the learning environment without being able to disrupt the rest of the class."

4. Does it matter if kids find school fun and enjoyable?

There is no right or wrong answer to the question. The goal is to get an idea of the applicant's ability to think critically on the topic of education and teaching and offer an informed opinion on the subject.

Suggested answer:

"While not required, I think having fun is an important part of making children excited about learning. If the students are excited to come to school each day, it makes teaching them easier and, I feel, makes them more likely to engage in the classroom and retain the information being taught."

5. If the teacher does something you strongly disagree with, how would you handle the situation?

Education assistants have to interact with many people throughout the day, so conflict will happen from time to time. This question aims to see if applicants understand ways to deal with conflict with their immediate supervisor while still being able to express their concerns.
